"Ana runs down the hill to a man with a sign and the burros and the books. Other children run to him too, skipping down hills and stomping through fields.

Who are you? Who are they? The children ask. The man says, "I am a librarian, a bibliotecario, and these are y burros, Alfa and Beto. Welcome to the Biblioburro, my biblioteca."

"But senor", Ana says, "I thought libraries were only in big cities and buildings."

"Not this one," says the librarian. "This is a moving library."

Then he spreads out his books and invites the children to join him under a tree.

The roads to Bulla Iftin, two hundred miles northeast of Nairobi, are impassable because of the desert sand, even for cars with fourwheel drive. But young people who live in nomadic villages in the area are hungry for books. So librarians use the most economical means of transportation - - - camels!

Read the passage. Find one detail in paragraph

1 and one detail in paragraph 2 that shows how the students of Bulla Iftin think that libraries are essential. Label your evidence with an E and underline.

Read these sentences ". The librarian places the grass mats on the ground in the shade of an acacia tree, making a place where children can sit. The students can treasure their new books for two weeks. When the library camels return, the children can trade their books for new ones."

How do these sentences show that the students think libraries are essential? Explain in complete sentences below.

Library camels are on the road five days a week. They can carry heavy loads and need little water in the heat of the desert. One camel may carry as many as five hundred books, weighing about four hundred pounds. A driver and a librarian divide the books into two boxes. They saddle them on the camel's back, which is covered with a grass mat for protection. A second camel carries a tent that serves as the library roof.

The students of Bulla Iftin eagerly await the arrival of the camels. When the library caravan finally reaches the village, the children watch as the librarian pitches the tent and displays the books on wooden shelves. The librarian places the grass mats on the ground in the shade of an acacia tree, making a place where children can sit. The students can treasure their new books for two weeks. When the library camels return, the children can trade their books for new ones.

- B. City
- C. Evil
- D. Weird

What are the two ways in this passage people living in Peru can receive books?

- A. Bags/suitcases and donkey carts
- B. Airplanes and boats
- C. Wagon and horse

In small, rural communities, books are delivered in wooden suitcases and plastic bags. These suitcases and contain books that bags the community can keep and share for the next three months. The number of books in each suitcase depends on the size of the small community. There are no library buildings in these small towns, and people gather outside, in the plaza, to see the books they can check out. In the coastal regions, books are sometimes delivered by donkey cart. The books are stored in the reading promoter's home.

Write the examples you find of each on the lines below the story.

My home, a moss covered rock, is an emerald fortress. It provides shelter from the heavy springtime showers, when the raindrops are like large iridescent pearls. My rock is neighbors with a weeping willow tree. Its branches are thick snakes, but to the children who come to swim from town, the willow is a majestic pirate ship. I peek my head between the daisies to watch the kids in brightly colored swimsuits plunge into the pool from the tips of the willow's branches. The water's surface is like a shattered mirror. A frenzy of ripples take over the pond, and the lily pads twirl like dancers who suddenly have the mad desire to switch partners. I fancy the idea of surfing the pond's wild waves one day!
